SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection contains General Office files selected by Professors John H. Bracey Jr. and August Meier from Group III of the NAACP collection (1956–1965). These are subject files that have not been microfilmed with other UPA editions of Papers of the NAACP because none of the subject groups was large enough to form a separate edition. Many of the subjects, however, document important aspects of the NAACP program between 1956 and 1965 as well as various facets of American race relations during the period. Taken together, these miscellaneous subject files serve as a valuable reference collection on the range of issues that engaged the NAACP from 1956 to 1965.

Series A includes miscellaneous alphabetical files from “A” through “F” (“Adopt-a-Branch” program through “Films”). Papers of the NAACP, Part 24, Special Subjects continues with two companion series. Series B covers “F” through “L” (“Foreign Affairs” through “Leagues and Organizations”). Series C covers “L” through “Z” (“Life Memberships” to “Zangrando”). Earlier editions of Special Subject Files can be found in Papers of the NAACP, Part 11: Special Subjects, 1910–1939 and Papers of the NAACP, Part 18: Special Subjects, 1940–1955. Many of the subjects covered in Part 24 have earlier files in Parts 11 and 18.

The major subject files in Series A contain material on Africa, the Church Department of the NAACP, Crime, Desegregation, Discrimination, Education, and Films. In addition, there are smaller files on Annual Reports, Articles, Awards, Josephine Baker, Bail Bond Monies, Daisy L. Bates, Anne Beadenkopf, Benefits, Black Muslims, Black Nationalism, Communism, Contributions (financial), The Crisis, W. E. B. Du Bois, Dwight D. Eisenhower, and Federal Judges.

The “Africa” files document the NAACP’s interest in African nationalism and colonial liberation movements. There are files on several new African nations. NAACP receptions for visiting African dignitaries such as Tom Mboya of Kenya, Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana, and Sekou Toure of Guinea are recorded. Interest in and support for organizations such as the All African Peoples Congress, the African National Congress, and Operation Crossroads Africa are apparent in many files. Efforts to contend with apartheid governments in South Africa and Rhodesia are covered, including early efforts to bring international sanctions against those regimes. In addition, the files depict the NAACP’s efforts to engage the U.S. Department of State regarding its general policy toward Africa and to appoint African American diplomats to African posts.

The "Annual Reports" files include draft reports from most NAACP departments for the 1956–1965 period. These include reports from the Housing Department, the Youth Department, the Labor Department and the Washington Bureau, the Church Department, the Life Membership Department, the Public Relations Department, and the Branch Department.

The "Articles" files include a wealth of drafts and reprints on 1960s civil rights issues. These articles address such topics as social and economic conditions in the South, the fledging youth movement, the wider civil rights movement, and reactions against the civil rights movement. There are articles exploring the relationship between the Jewish and African American communities and the question of using violence as a means of advancing the cause of civil rights. The rise of militant black nationalism and the Black Muslim movement are also covered. Many of these articles are written by NAACP leaders such as Roy Wilkins, Herbert Hill, Henry Lee Moon, and John Morsell.

The "Awards" files feature the Spingarn Medal Award offered by the NAACP to the African American with the most distinguished accomplishments for the year. These files provide interesting bits of biographical information about accomplished African Americans. Individuals receiving in-depth coverage include Duke Ellington, Medgar Evers, Langston Hughes, Martin Luther King Jr., Jackie Robinson, Daisy L. Bates and the "Little Rock Nine" (students involved in integrating Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas), Leontyne Price, and Roy Wilkins.

The "Bail Bond Monies" file provides a window on the massive claims that civil rights demonstrators put upon NAACP funds. During the height of the civil rights movement, picketers and mass demonstrators were arrested by the hundreds in cities throughout America. Although many of the arrested demonstrators were not NAACP members, the common practice was for those in jail to petition the local NAACP chapter for bail bond money. The national NAACP established an energetic fund-raising apparatus to meet the challenge. This file provides some information on that campaign. Additional material on the bail bond campaign can be found in Papers of the NAACP, Part 21: Relations with the Modern Civil Rights Movement.

The "Benefits" files document NAACP fund-raising efforts supported by black celebrities and entertainers. Among those who assisted the NAACP in various benefit performances are Sammy Davis Jr., Josephine Baker, Cab Calloway, Nat King Cole, Harry Belafonte, Leontyne Price, Miles Davis, Billy Taylor, Crystal Joyce, and Art Blakey.

The "Black Muslim" and "Black Nationalism" files document the NAACP's apprehension over these movements and its efforts to strike a note of conciliation. The Muslims presented the NAACP with two major challenges.

Their philosophy of racial separatism cut against the grain of the NAACP integrationist tradition. In addition, the advocacy by some Muslims of violence as a tactic against American racism proved both a public relations problem for the civil rights movement as well as a challenge to the NAACP's strategy of legal redress and political pressure. The files document instances of cooperation and of hostility between the NAACP and the separatist movements. There is correspondence with the renowned black religion scholar C. Eric Lincoln regarding his study of the Black Muslim movement. Concern over anti-Semitism among black nationalists is also documented.

The "Church Department" files are the largest collection in Series A. By organizing this department in 1957, the NAACP made a significant departure from its own tradition, and it also helped lay the foundation for one of the most powerful political coalitions in late twentieth-century American politics. For many reasons, having mostly to do with the perceived conservatism of black churches, the NAACP never built up a membership base in black religious institutions. Instead it worked to attract black professionals and college-educated youths. Its major coalition-building effort, begun in the late 1940s, was with white religious organizations and the labor movement. In the late 1950s, many black churches shed the image of conservatism. Martin Luther King Jr. and the black ministry involved with the Montgomery, Alabama, bus boycott symbolized the emergence of an activist, assertive black ministry. The NAACP Church Department worked to organize ministers and religious activists on a national basis. It worked across race and denominational lines to bring churchgoers and ministers alike into the civil rights movement. The department sought to bring the heroism of the southern civil rights movement to the attention of religious congregations and to solicit their support. It helped organize financial contributions, housing cooperatives, voter registration campaigns, and even direct-action programs such as sit-ins and selective buying campaigns. It organized churches behind the NAACP legislative program, especially federal civil rights legislation. It provided national NAACP leaders as speakers for local congregations and also leveraged its relationship with churches to conduct NAACP membership campaigns in individual congregations.

The "Church Department" files are arranged in three major subseries. The first is an alphabetical correspondence file, arranged by last name of correspondent. This includes correspondence with hundreds of local ministers and church leaders. The second group is the correspondence files of the NAACP, including but not exclusively Church Department staff. Among the NAACP leaders with files in the staff correspondence grouping are Ruby Hurley, Medgar Evers, Tarea Pittman, Gloster Current, and Roy Wilkins. The third grouping is of subject files. This includes files of "Form Letters," which include copies of the standard mailings the association sent to churches, and files under "Lists of Churches," which record the extent of the NAACP Church Department's contacts. Files titled "Press Releases" and "Programs" give a good overview of some of the national programs the Church Department developed.

The "Communism" files cover attacks on the NAACP as a communist organization and inquiries along those lines by the House Un-American Activities Committee. The association's determination to maintain a policy of independence from communist influence is documented, but it stopped short of siding with the fervid anticommunist right.

The "Contributions" files document some of the key fund-raising networks in the African American community. Included are files on the fund-raising work of sororities (Alpha Kappa Alpha), fraternities (Alpha Phi Alpha), churches, and voluntary clubs (Links and United Clubs). Many of these organizations were driven by young activists and professionals. Files on Contributions from the Armed Forces and from Branches (Boxes A-78–A-79) were judged insignificant and were not selected by the editors.

The "Crime" files are another large component of Series A. They include cases of African American crime in which matters of due process were a concern, as well as cases of vigilante crimes committed against blacks, including lynchings and beatings of civil rights workers. The group is arranged alphabetically and includes both states and subjects. The states files are from all regions of the United States and include complaints about police brutality, disparate sentences for whites and blacks, and emotionally charged rape cases. In files for northern states, such as New York, there are materials on juvenile delinquency. Some of the more spectacular acts of vigilante violence during the late 1950s and early 1960s are recorded. The Kentucky and North Carolina files cover the bombings of the homes of civil rights leaders Carl and Anne Braden and NAACP leader Kelly Alexander, respectively. The Mississippi file includes information on the lynchings of Charles Mack Parker and Emmett Till as well as the murders of three civil rights workers.

The "Desegregation" files are also a large component. Arranged alphabetically by subject, this group includes topics such as "Church Action," "General," "Legislation," "Public Opinion," and "Theaters." The "Legislation" files document efforts of southern segregationists to craft legislation obstructing desegregation as well as of efforts toward comprehensive federal civil rights legislation. The "Public Opinion" files on desegregation are especially rich. They contain material on southern defiance of desegregation and material on opinion leaders' and celebrities' attitudes. There are extracts of newspaper and magazine articles on desegregation from all over the United States. Files on Desegregation of Schools (Boxes A-98–A-106) were microfilmed with Part 3: The Campaign for Educational Equality, Series D: General Office Files, 1956–1965.

The "Discrimination" files are yet another large group of files. They include case subject files, arranged alphabetically, documenting problems of racial discrimination throughout American society. The group includes employment discrimination by labor organizations and corporations, including banks and lending institutions; exclusion of African Americans from private clubs and organizations; discrimination in professional and commercial services; housing discrimination; and discrimination in access to public facilities. A large subsection on "Transportation" details discriminatory practices in common carriers. Two large files document discrimination in professional and amateur sports. Files titled "Bills" and "States" document state legislative efforts to pass antidiscrimination laws and to strengthen the enforcement machinery of existing laws.

The "Education" files document the process of desegregation in public schools. They also cover NAACP pressures to curtail federal aid to school districts that remained in defiance of desegregation orders. Some of the files touch upon the impact of race prejudice upon African American students.

The "Eisenhower" files document a range of race-related issues during the Eisenhower presidency. These include the failed NAACP proposal to establish a federal commission to investigate reprisals against blacks in the South who asserted civil rights claims; proposed antilynching and comprehensive civil rights legislation; the Little Rock, Arkansas, school desegregation controversy; denials of voting rights in southern states; and discrimination in the armed forces. Especially conspicuous in these files are pleas for the president to condemn acts of violence against African Americans in the South.

The "Films" files focus primarily on protests against negative portrayals of African Americans in Hollywood films and television productions. There are also documented efforts to increase opportunities for blacks in the motion picture industry and to encourage the production of documentary films on American race relations. There is also a file documenting the continuing NAACP protest against screening or televising the D. W. Griffith classic, Birth of a Nation.

NOTE ON SOURCES

This microfilm has been produced from the NAACP collection at the Manuscripts Division of the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. All files in this edition come from Group III of the NAACP collection, 1956–1965.

EDITORIAL NOTE

All selections for this edition were made after a personal survey of the entire General Office File by Professors August Meier and John H. Bracey Jr. Every file chosen for this edition has been microfilmed in its entirety.

PRINCIPAL CORRESPONDENTS INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major correspondents in this microform publication. The first number after each subentry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file folder containing correspondence by the person begins. Hence, 7: 0766 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at Frame 0766 of Reel 7. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find the folder title, inclusive dates, and a list of Major Topics and Principal Correspondents arranged in the order in which they appear on the film.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics, personalities, activities, and programs in this microform publication. The first number after each subentry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file folder containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 3: 0829 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at Frame 0829 of Reel 3. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find the folder title, inclusive dates, and a list of Major Topics and Principal Correspondents, arranged in the order in which they appear on the film. If the only mention of a company or entity is in relation to a discrimination complaint, the user will find the name in the entry on Discrimination.
