SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This edition contains the working files of NAACP national staff members between 1956 and 1965. The files document the actions of NAACP leaders to implement the association's wide-ranging program of desegregation expanding civil rights through the United States in the late 1950s and early 1960s. They also provide valuable insights into the leadership of the modern civil rights movement at the highest levels. Staff conferences and the development of political and legal strategies are documented. Behind-the-scenes disputes are sometimes revealed. Assessments of the NAACP's public image are recorded in light of increasing mass media coverage of race relations in America.

The impact of external events on NAACP leaders is also documented, including reactions to the rise of black nationalism, the emergence of competing civil rights groups, the growth of urban ghettos and the explosion of race riots in northern and western cities, the surge of vigilante violence in southern states, presidential elections, and the war in Vietnam. Additionally, many NAACP organizational policies are covered, including budgets, salaries, and expenses.

There was constant tension in the relationship between the NAACP national office and the hundreds of local NAACP branches. While the national organization set objectives and policies, local branches enjoyed considerable autonomy and often set priorities at variance with expectations at the national level.

The series is arranged alphabetically by last name of the staff person. Following are some of the key NAACP leaders whose working files are included:

Robert L. Carter, General Counsel. Carter served as legal adviser to the national office as well as to local NAACP attorneys in cases generated by NAACP branches. Among his most important responsibilities during this period was the defense of the NAACP and its officers against legal actions by hostile southern officials. There is scattered documentation on this matter in the files. (The bulk of Carter's defense of the NAACP against hostile state actions can be found in Papers of the NAACP, Part 23, Legal Department Files.) The file contains exchanges between Carter and NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins regarding legal matters facing the national office. There is also some correspondence from local attorneys illuminating Carter's work with local branches. This work included adjudicating conflicts within a branch (such as disputed elections and allegations of misconduct or financial irregularities) as well as offering legal advice on civil rights litigation.

Gloster B. Current, Branch Director. Current kept files that include reports on NAACP branch politics throughout the country. Of particular importance are Current's communications with southern branches that were under pressure to reveal NAACP membership lists to hostile state investigators. These are primarily in Current's "Memoranda" file. A December 1964 communication of Current to the Community Relations Service of the U.S. Department of Commerce (in the Correspondence file) indicates cities where he feels race riots could be imminent in the mid-1960s and ideas that federal agencies might pursue to avoid riots. Other documents in the Current files detail membership building strategies and controversies over branch elections.

James Farmer, National Activities Coordinator. James Farmer promoted NAACP programs at the grassroots level. These included educational programs about the NAACP, training sessions for local leaders, and local campaigns against segregation, housing discrimination, denial of voting rights, and employment discrimination. Farmer worked closely with other organizations, particularly religious and labor organizations, to build coalitions in pursuit of NAACP objectives. His files include information on NAACP networking with organizations such as the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, the American Friends Service Committee, the Bank Street College of Education, the American Committee on Africa, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and others. Farmer also worked with competing civil rights organizations such as the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) at the local level. Many of his communications document local civil rights initiatives that drew together the NAACP and these various organizations. These include voter registration drives, school desegregation drives, protests against housing and employment discrimination, and especially leadership training programs.

Herbert Hill, National Labor Secretary. Hill's working files document his energetic and far-flung campaign against employment discrimination. Of special interest is Hill's determination to implement Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. He devised a comprehensive strategy for the NAACP to make the employment discrimination chapter of the act a viable force by urging local NAACP branches to file lawsuits. As a result local branches sued scores of major American corporations—such as Lockheed, Philip Morris, IBM, Southern Pacific—to integrate their work force. Under Hill's guidance, NAACP locals also sued labor unions and state employment agencies.

Hill was especially assertive in engaging government agencies to intervene against employment discrimination. His files include complaints to the President's Committee on Contract Compliance and the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission in the 1950s and early 1960s before the passage of Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act. Hill also involved the NAACP in legislative battles to strengthen or secure both federal and state fair employment laws. The files contain information about the 1957 Colorado fair employment act as well as efforts to strengthen protection of agricultural workers through the federal Agricultural Labor Reform Act. Scattered throughout the Hill files are memos on strategies for engaging government agencies to deter employment discrimination.

Hill also addressed unemployment of African Americans in American urban and industrial centers. Several memos note the precipitous rise in unemployment in the 1960s. Among the tactics he suggested to combat unemployment are boycotts and selective buying campaigns.

Hill was also a popular and rousing speaker. There are many references to his speaking engagements across the country. A file of "Statements" contains testimonies Hill presented to various government and legislative bodies. Toward the end of the Hill files are three files of "Reports," which include annual reports of the labor secretary. These provide an excellent synopsis of Hill's activities.

Madison S. Jones, Special Assistant for Housing. Madison Jones supported fair housing campaigns by local NAACP branches and networked the national NAACP with fair and affordable housing providers. His reports, scattered throughout the two files, detail many local fair housing cases from points throughout the country. Many of the housing complaints pertain to displacement of African Americans and discrimination in urban renewal projects.

Memoranda. These files contain circular communications, usually issued by Roy Wilkins to the national office staff. They detail routine office policies governing expenses, travel, and salaries. Some discuss important events, such as sit-ins, television broadcasts, and conferences. Others cover NAACP strategies and questions of structure and organization.

Henry Lee Moon, Publicity Director. As publicity director in the 1950s and 1960s, Moon was responsible for bringing the NAACP into the television age. He monitored radio and television programs pertaining to race relations and worked with Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins to safeguard the NAACP's public image. He groomed a corps of NAACP radio and TV commentators and contested the barrage of negative publicity aimed at the association as opposition to desegregation intensified during this period. Moon also funnelled information about NAACP activities to the mass media, including the press. His information included accounts of local civil rights activities by NAACP branches and newsworthy items on programs of the national office. In order to keep a flow of current information about the association, Moon regularly queried other department heads for status reports, and these provide a valuable picture of work in the national office.

John Morsell, Special Assistant to Executive Secretary. Morsell was Roy Wilkins's special assistant, and his duties mirrored the wide range of activities Wilkins took on. He assisted in the overall management of the national office, including personnel policies and organizational structure. Morsell assisted Wilkins in monitoring the progress of federal civil rights legislation, the activities of other civil rights organizations, and the public image of the NAACP. Additionally, he became involved in a number of community causes in the city of New York, such as the Advisory Board on Public Welfare, the All Day Neighborhood Schools movement, and admissions policies at the City University and State University of New York.

June Shagaloff, Special Counsel. Shagaloff, an assistant to Robert L. Carter in the Legal Department, was assigned the task of devising strategies to unravel de facto segregation in school districts outside of the South. Her regular reports detail the NAACP campaign against de facto school segregation. They expose the many segregation strategies resorted to by public officials and housing developers outside the South and they document a wide array of possible remedies.

Althea T. Simmons, Secretary for Training. Simmons, a former NAACP field secretary for the West Coast, headed the NAACP Summer Project of 1965, which was a program to recruit civil rights workers from across the country to live in the South for the summer and assist voter registration drives. Her file documents the NAACP leadership training program and also sheds light on NAACP field work in the South. There is information on voter registration drives, desegregation petitions, and selective buying campaigns. There is also some material pertaining to Simmons's work in California, including an investigation of Ku Klux Klan activities, voter registration work, and interjecting civil rights issues in electoral politics.

Roy Wilkins, Executive Secretary. Wilkins's files are by far the largest component of the present edition. They begin on Reel 7 and run through the beginning of Reel 14. Wilkins monitored every aspect of the NAACP program, and his files reflect the daily routine at the highest level of the association. In addition to overseeing the far-reaching NAACP program, Wilkins guarded the NAACP's image in the mass media and set a tone of cooperation between the NAACP and other civil rights organizations. Wilkins's files show that the solicited reports from many staff members about parallel civil rights organizations, such as CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) and the SCLC. He also vigilantly monitored relations between NAACP leaders and Communist-affiliated causes. His files contain a large amount of personal correspondence with friends and acquaintances. Behind-the-scenes negotiations between the NAACP and national chain stores concerning sit-down demonstrations are well documented in Wilkins's papers. Many circulars sent to branch leaders during the period are also brought together. Of special interest are the large files on Wilkins's appearances on televised public affairs programs such as Face the Nation, Meet the Press, and Open End.

In addition to the executives' working files, the series contains office files on qualifications for executive positions, unionization of the NAACP staff, and travel itineraries of NAACP officers. Fund-raising and membership development were also constant concerns, and Wilkins's files document his abiding interest in these matters.

The large Wilkins file series is further subdivided into subjects, which are arranged alphabetically: Autograph, Awards and Honors, Book-request, Column, European Trips, Expenses, Greetings to Various Organizations, Hotel Reservations, Interviews, Invitations, Jamaican Trip, Memoranda, Personal and General, Public Relations Department, Radio and Television, Thirtieth Anniversary Dinner, and Time Magazine. The most substantive of these subjects for documenting NAACP policies are the Interviews, Memoranda, Personal and General, and Radio and Television subseries. The Memoranda and Personal and General files are the heart of the Wilkins working files. Although the Memoranda files run only through 1962, they provide valuable documentation on school desegregation cases, white reprisals against civil rights workers, the black student movement in the South, voter registration drives, federal civil rights legislation, federal fair employment and urban renewal programs, NAACP fund-raising activities, and the NAACP summer civil rights program. The Personal and General file is in fact a correspondence file, running from 1956 through 1965. It documents the NAACP's defense against hostile actions by southern states, public relations work and fund-raising, relations between the NAACP and the Legal Defense and Educational Fund, federal civil rights legislation, NAACP boycotts and formulation of boycott policy, reaction to the Prince Edward County (Virginia) school desegregation case, allegations of Communist influence on the NAACP, the proliferation of civil rights demonstrations in the 1960s, relations between the NAACP and other civil rights organizations, Wilkins's relations with President John F. Kennedy and his reaction to the Kennedy assassination, rumors about assassination plots against Wilkins and about his health and continuation as NAACP leader, the rise of racial violence outside the South (including the Watts, Los Angeles, race riot), and the emergence of the white student movement.

The Radio and Television series shows Wilkins turning mass media criticism of the NAACP's militancy to the association's advantage by effective personal presentations on television programs.

Jack Wood, Housing Secretary. This series documents the NAACP involvement in both local and national housing issues. One of the most frequent topics is federal urban renewal policies, which in many localities were used to raze African American neighborhoods without any attempt to rehouse displaced residents. NAACP branches fought these policies in scores of cities, and the Wood files document many of these battles. Wood's files also document the NAACP's interest in affordable housing for persons of low income. In addition, the problem of housing discrimination was pervasive, and Wood's files show it was of constant concern to the NAACP. Wood attempted to work with state fair housing initiatives as well as for fair housing policies at the federal level. The latter included fair housing provisions in federal housing and loan guarantee programs as well as a fair housing chapter in the 1964 federal Civil Rights Act. Wood's files are divided into three overlapping series, General Correspondence, Itinerary and Expenses, and Memoranda.

Herbert L. Wright, Youth Secretary. There are two files pertaining to the office of Youth Secretary in this edition. This series only hints at the energetic youth movement of the 1950s and early 1960s. It contains some significant material on the college youth movement, on youth organizations outside the NAACP, and on the NAACP youth program. A far more complete record of the NAACP youth movement can be found in Papers of the NAACP, Part 19 Youth File, Series D, Youth Department Files, 1956–1965.

Researchers should also note that earlier editions of Papers of the NAACP provide complementary and, in some cases, much more complete documentation on many of the subjects raised in the working files of the national office staff. These companion files include Part 3, The Campaign for Educational Equality, Series D, General Office Files, 1956–1965; Supplement to Part 4, Voting Rights, General Office Files, 1956–1965; Supplement to Part 5, Residential Segregation, General Office Files, 1956–1965; Supplement to Part 13, The NAACP and Labor, 1956–1965; Part 20, White Resistance and Reprisals, 1956–1965; Part 21, NAACP Relations with the Modern Civil Rights Movement, and Part 24, Special Subjects, 1956–1965. In addition, many of the legal cases that the NAACP carried on behalf of local branches are covered in two companion editions of Legal Department files: Papers of the NAACP, Part 22, Legal Department Administrative Files, 1956–1965, which are the Robert L. Carter papers but include substantial material on June Shagaloff's campaign against de facto school segregation, and Part 23, Legal Department Case Files, 1956–1965.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics, personalities, activities, and programs in this microform publication. The first number after each subentry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file folder containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 5: 0356 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at Frame 0356 of Reel 5. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find the folder title, inclusive dates, and a list of Major Topics and Principal Correspondents, arranged in the order in which they appear on the film.

If the only mention of a company or entity is in relation to a discrimination complaint, the user will find the name in the entry on Discrimination.
