BRIEF HISTORY OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S PARTY

When Alice Paul arrived in Washington, D.C., in 1912, the proposed federal woman suffrage amendment was over thirty years old. The amendment, drafted by Susan B. Anthony, was first introduced in Congress in 1878. Since then it had received little attention from either Congress or the suffrage movement. Suffragists, who had been working to achieve the vote on a state-by-state basis, viewed the national amendment as impractical and impossible to obtain. Alice Paul, Lucy Burns, and a small group of determined women decided to do the impossible.

Alice Paul began her work in Washington as the chairman of the Congressional Committee of the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA). This self-sustaining branch of NAWSA worked in 1913 to draw public attention to federal suffrage. Through an inaugural parade, deputations to President Woodrow Wilson, and numerous public meetings the Committee began its campaign of public education. As it became necessary to provide physical and financial support for these activities, the Committee formed the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage in April 1913. The Congressional Union became an affiliated society of NAWSA.

In 1914 the Congressional Union, with Alice Paul as its chairman, became independent of NAWSA. For the next three years the Congressional Union continued its campaign to achieve federal woman suffrage. The Union lobbied Congress and the president, held public parades and meetings, sent speakers throughout the country, formed state branches, and perfected their organizational structure.

In 1914 the Congressional Union initiated the most unique feature of its campaign strategy---political activism. That fall during the congressional election campaigns, the Union supported no candidates, but rather opposed all Democrats on the basis that the party which controlled Congress refused to pass the suffrage amendment. The Congressional Union and later the National Woman's Party used the argument of party responsibility again and again in their suffrage campaign.

When the Congressional Union faced the 1916 presidential election campaign, it decided to consolidate and organize the votes of enfranchised women in the western states to defeat the Democrats. The Union called a convention in Chicago in June 1916, and the National Woman's Party was formed. The National Woman's Party consisted of the enfranchised members of the Congressional Union. The Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage and the National Woman's Party coexisted until 1917 when the two merged under the title, National Woman's Party (NWP). The NWP continued the tactics of the Congressional Union---publicity, lobbying, and political activity.

Throughout 1917 the NWP picketed the White House. This confrontation began peacefully, but as the United States entered World War I the pickets became increasingly distasteful to the nation and the government. In June the first arrests of the picketers occurred. The picket and the arrests continued, and the suffragists began to serve jail sentences. The jailed suffragists, often mistreated physically and mentally, went on hunger strikes and were force fed.

The picket, the arrests, and the prison terms served their purpose. In 1918, President Wilson expressed his support for the federal suffrage amendment, and on January 10 the House of Representatives passed the amendment. Although the NWP began a concerted lobbying campaign in the Senate, the Senate refused to pass the amendment. Again, the NWP resorted to public demonstrations. The White House and the Capitol area were picketed, President Wilson's words were burned, and beginning in 1919 watchfires were kept burning before the White House. Suffragists were arrested and jailed. In 1918 the NWP also opposed anti-suffrage candidates in the senatorial elections.

On May 21, 1919 the House passed the suffrage amendment; on June 4, 1919 the Senate passed the amendment. The amendment now required ratification by thirty-six state legislatures. Through 1919 and 1920 the NWP shifted its lobbying efforts from the national to the state level. A number of states quickly ratified the amendment, but as the campaign neared its end the NWP found its efforts blocked by the political intrigues of the Republican and Democratic parties. Finally, on August 8, 1920 the thirty-sixth state, Tennessee, ratified after a rigorous campaign by the NWP.

After eight years of intensive work and the expenditure of three quarters of a million dollars by the Party, woman suffrage was guaranteed by the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution. The National Woman's Party officially ended its suffrage campaign at its February 1921, convention. With suffrage achieved the NWP began a new campaign of equal rights for women.

A more detailed account of the activities of the National Woman's Party suffrage campaign can be found in the yearly summaries in the description of Series I. The researcher is also referred to published accounts of the campaign such as The Story of the Woman's Party, by Inez Haynes Irwin (1921); Jailed for Freedom, by Doris Stevens (1920); and Lifting the Curtain: The State and National Woman Suffrage Campaign in Pennsylvania as I Saw Them, by Caroline Katzenstein (1955); as well as the microfilm edition of The National Woman's Party Papers, 1913-1974. ## DESCRIPTION OF THE ARRANGEMENT OF THE PAPERS

The National Woman's Party Papers: The Suffrage Years, 1913-1920, document the militant aspect of the suffrage campaign in the United States. The papers, concerned almost exclusively with the federal suffrage amendment campaign, reflect the culmination of over fifty years of suffrage agitation. The papers also reflect the creation, growth, and development of the National Woman's Party which became an active organization in the women's rights movement.

The papers date primarily from 1913 to 1920---the period when the National Woman's Party was active in the suffrage campaign. A small amount of material dates from both before and after this period.

The National Woman's Party Papers: The Suffrage Years, 1913-1920, are arranged in the following series:

- Series I Correspondence, 1891-1940
- Series II Administrative Files, 1913-1921
  - A. Annual Reports, 1913-1915
  - B. Departmental Reports, 1913-1921
  - C. Constitutions, 1913-1918
  - D. Legislative Reports, 1913-1920
  - E. The Suffragist Material, 1913-1921
- Series III Printed Matter, 1889-1936
  - A. National Woman's Party Publications, 1913-1921
    - 1. Press Releases, 1913-1921
    - 2. Pamphlets, 1914-1920
    - 3. Leaflets and Broadsides, 1913-1921
  - B. Publications of Other Organizations, 1901-1935
    - 1. Government Documents, 1904-1935
    - 2. Pamphlets, 1902-1920
    - 3. Leaflets and Broadsides, 1901-1922
  - C. Newspaper Clippings, 1889-1936
    - 1. Miscellaneous Newspaper Clippings, 1889-1936
    - 2. Newspaper Clipping Scrapbooks, 1914-1919
  - D. Cartoons, 1913-1925
- Series IV Photographs, 1913-1921

A frame counter has been used in filming to facilitate scholarly citation. A complete reel list follows the series descriptions.

SERIES I CORRESPONDENCE, 1891-1940

The National Woman's Party Papers: The Suffrage Years consist principally of correspondence, 1891-1940; however, the bulk of the correspondence dates primarily from December 1912, when Alice Paul arrived in Washington to February 1921, when the NWP officially closed its suffrage campaign.

The correspondence is arranged chronologically by year, month, and day. Partially dated material is placed at the end of the month or year; undated material is placed after the dated correspondence. Enclosures were filmed following their letter of transmittal. In some cases, enclosures have become separated from their letter of transmittal. These enclosures are sometimes found in the partially dated material at the end of each month.

Included in this correspondence series are incoming and outgoing correspondence, post cards, telegrams, cablegrams, memoranda, field reports, expense reports, form correspondence, itineraries, resolutions, statements, and miscellaneous bills and receipts. The series includes various types of lists such as NWP membership and officer lists; The Suffragist subscription lists; contact lists; and lists of fairs, conventions, and organizational meetings to be attended by NWP speakers. Also included are manuscript and typescript copies of affidavits dating from the 1913 concern over the inaction of Washington, D.C., police during the inaugural suffrage parade of that year. Affidavits from 1917 to 1920 detail the treatment of the suffragists imprisoned at Occoquan Workhouse and the District Jail.

Materials relating to Congressional Union and NWP conventions, conferences, and special events are included in this series. These materials consist of typescript and printed invitations, calls to conventions, and programs, as well as minutes and reports. In many instances convention minutes are incomplete. Duplicates of printed convention material were also filmed with the NWP leaflets and broadsides. Undated items are dated on the first day of the convention or conference; a list of Congressional Union and NWP conventions and conferences with their inclusive dates is found in Appendix B.

The incoming and outgoing correspondence and related materials detail the organizational development of the NWP and the strategy of the Party's suffrage campaign. Field reports from and correspondence with NWP organizers concern the NWP's 1914, 1916, and 1918 political campaigns, the organization of state branches, and the ratification campaign. Correspondence concerns the Party's lobbying efforts with Congress and the president. For a brief sketch of the contents of the correspondence the researcher is referred to the yearly summaries at the end of this description.

The correspondence also relates to the NWP's involvement with other suffrage and women's organizations such as the Women's Political Union, the Southern States Woman Suffrage Conference, The National Council of Women Voters, Women's National Prohibition Federation, the Just Government League of Maryland, the Federation of Women's Clubs, and the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage. The relationship of the NWP with the National American Woman Suffrage Association is well documented in the correspondence.

The correspondence in the collection is primarily among officers and members of the National Woman's Party. Some of the major correspondents are:

YEARLY SUMMARIES FOR SERIES I

In 1912 Alice Paul, a young Quaker from Moorestown, New Jersey, presented Mary Ware Dennett and Harriot Stanton Blatch of the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA) with the idea of actively working for a federal woman suffrage amendment. Mrs. Dennett considered the idea foolish, while Mrs. Blatch viewed it as premature, but with the backing of Mrs. Blatch and Jane Addams, Alice Paul was appointed chairman of the Congressional Committee of NAWSA.

Alice Paul's interest in woman suffrage developed while she was a student in England. Alice Paul became an active worker in Emmeline Pankhurst's organization, the National Women's Social and Political Union, and was arrested and jailed on various occasions for her suffrage activity. With this background in the English suffrage campaign, Alice Paul hoped to create the same enthusiasm and concerted effort in the suffrage movement in the United States.

Appointed to serve with Alice Paul on the Congressional Committee were Lucy Burns and Crystal Eastman Benedict. Dora Lewis and Mary R. Beard later became members of the Committee.

In December 1912 Alice Paul went to Washington, D.C., to begin her work for the Congressional Committee. She began soliciting individuals and organizations in the District of Columbia to provide financial and physical support for the Committee. In December the Committee began plans for a suffrage parade during the 1913 presidential inauguration.

On January 2, 1913 the Congressional Committee opened its Washington headquarters at 1420 F Street. The next two months were spent organizing and financing the inaugural procession. The purpose of the parade, a joint effort of the Congressional Committee and Washington area suffrage groups, was to draw national attention to woman suffrage and to force federal action to achieve it.

Between 8,000 and 10,000 people took part in the March 3 procession. The parade marched down Pennsylvania Avenue past the White House and Capitol to a mass meeting at Constitution Hall. The parade was disrupted at several points by onlookers, and many of the police refused to restrain abuse by the crowd. The lack of police protection for the marchers led to a Congressional investigation of police conduct.

Three separate delegations of women called on President Woodrow Wilson in March seeking his support for woman suffrage. A group of five women, led by Alice Paul, met Wilson on March 17. A delegation of the College Equal Suffrage League led by Elsie Hill saw Wilson on March 28. Then on March 31 the National Council of Women Voters led by Dr. Cora Smith King met the president. Wilson was cordial, but always noncommittal.

While Congress convened on April 7, Alice Paul spoke at a mass meeting in the Columbia Theatre. State delegations then marched to the Capitol and presented Congress with petitions calling for a federal woman suffrage amendment.

On the same day, George E. Chamberlain introduced the suffrage amendment as Senate Joint Resolution 1. Frank Mondell later introduced a similar bill in the House. The text of the amendment, as it was introduced in 1913 and reintroduced throughout the suffrage campaign, read:

Section 1. The right of Citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

Section 2. Congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to enforce the provisions of this article.

The Senate bill was referred to the Majority Committee on Woman Suffrage, which held hearings on April 19 for the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage and on April 26 for the suffrage organizations.

In April the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage was formed. This group, drawn primarily from women in the District of Columbia area, supported the work of the Congressional Committee of NAWSA. Alice Paul also served as chairman of the Congressional Union. The Congressional Committee of NAWSA and the Congressional Union were distinct organizations.

The Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage met on May 14 and favorably voted out the suffrage bill; however, the bill was not reported to the Senate until June 13. In May the Congressional Committee began lobbying for creation of a suffrage committee in the House of Representatives. Suffrage bills in the House were reported to the Judiciary Committee where they were tabled indefinite.

The Congressional Union undertook various projects during the summer to draw public attention to federal suffrage. In July, members toured various parts of the country holding meetings and collecting petitions supporting suffrage. The tours arrived at Hyattsville, Maryland, on July 31 where they were greeted by a Senate delegation. The group then drove to Washington and presented their petitions to Congress.

From August 13-15 the Congressional Union sponsored a conference of the National Council of Women Voters. On August 14 the Council had a hearing before the House Rules Committee to ask for a House suffrage committee. The speakers included Jane Addams, Harvey W. Wiley, Cora Smith King, and Emma Smith DeVoe. The conference closed on August 15 with a meeting at the Belasco Theatre where Jane Addams spoke.

During the summer the Congressional Union hired Edith Marsden and Mabel Vernon as organizers to work in Delaware, New Jersey, Rhode Island, and Long Island obtaining members and money for the Union. Branches were formed in various states. Chairmen appointed for the state organizations included Dora Lewis in Pennsylvania, Mrs. John Turney in Tennessee, and Annie Porritt in Connecticut.

On October 14 The Suffragist opened its office with Rheta Childe Dorr as editor and James Keating as business manager. Alice Paul had been planning a weekly bulletin, The National Suffrage Bulletin, since April. The name was later changed, and the first issue of The Suffragist appeared November 15.

The Congressional Union sponsored a mass meeting on November 16 at the Columbia Theatre to welcome a delegation of New Jersey women. The main speaker at the meeting was Inez Milholland Boissevain. The next day seventy-three of the New Jersey women called on President Wilson seeking his support for suffrage.

From November 29 to December 5 the Congressional Union hosted the 45th Convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. The convention began November 30 with a meeting at which Anna H. Shaw, Jane Addams, and Helen Ring Robinson spoke. On December 3 NAWSA was represented at a hearing before the House Rules Committee by Anna H. Shaw, Carrie Chapman Catt, Jane Addams, and Ida Husted Harper. Then on December 8 a delegation of ninety-four women led by Anna H. Shaw met with Woodrow Wilson. After the convention a suffrage school was conducted by prominent leaders in the movement.

Throughout much of 1913 the Congressional Committee of NAWSA had found its strategy, policy, and authority disputed by officers of NAWSA. As a result, NAWSA selected a new Congressional Committee in December with Mrs. Medill McCormick as chairman.

The Congressional Union which had been an affiliated society of NAWSA withdrew and reapplied as an auxiliary society. The Executive Committee of the Congressional Union expanded to include Alice Paul, Lucy Burns, Dora Lewis, Mary R. Beard, Crystal Eastman Benedict, and Mrs. Medill McCormick, who later withdrew.

1914

The Congressional Union held its first meeting of 1914 on January 11 at the home of Elizabeth Kent. Mrs. Kent had formed a "Committee of 100" to raise $2000 for support of the headquarters, but over $9000 was pledged for the Union's work.

During January the organization of the Union developed further. The Executive Committee grew to include Elizabeth Kent, Edith Hooker, Elsie Hill, and Mrs. Gilson Gardner. Jessie Hardy Stubbs became chairman of the press department and reorganized it with a press chairman in each state. Doris Stevens joined the Union as executive secretary.

In 1914 Alva E. Belmont became interested in the Union and began backing it financially. When the Union began forming a National Advisory Council in July, Mrs. Belmont became one of its most influential members.

In January a branch of the Congressional Union was organized in Maryland under the chairmanship of Mary B. Dixon. The Delaware headquarters, established in 1913, was maintained by Mabel Vernon. Later in the year a branch of the Union was formed in Minnesota.

In early 1914 a schism developed in the Congressional Union's membership. A small group of members withdrew from the Union and supported the newly appointed Congressional Committee of NAWSA.

A deputation of over three hundred working women gathered in Washington in February. Following a mass meeting on February 2 where Rose Winslow and Doris Stevens spoke, the women, led by Elizabeth Glendower Evans and Josephine Drier, marched to the White House. President Wilson received a delegation of twenty-five women who asked him to support the woman suffrage amendment.

The executive board of NAWSA, on February 12, met with Alice Paul, Lucy Burns, and Dora Lewis in an attempt to resolve the differences between the Union and NAWSA. NAWSA later voted against admitting the Congressional Union as an auxiliary member. Throughout the suffrage campaign NAWSA opposed the policy and strategy of the Congressional Union and the National Woman's Party.

The House Rules Committee had refused on January 24 to create a suffrage committee, so on March 3 the Union had a hearing before the Judiciary Committee seeking a favorable report on the Bristow-Mondell suffrage amendment. The speakers at the hearing included Elizabeth Glendower Evans, Cora Smith King, Mary Beard, Elizabeth Kent, Katherine H. Hepburn, and Crystal Eastman Benedict. The Congressional Committee of NAWSA also appeared at the hearing and proposed a new amendment which would require states to have a referendum on woman suffrage whenever eight per cent of a state's voters requested such a vote. This was much more complicated than the Bristow-Mondell amendment which would grant woman suffrage when three fourths of the state legislatures ratified it.

On March 19 the suffrage bill was voted on in the Senate and defeated by eleven votes. The next day Senator Bristow reintroduced the suffrage bill and Senator Shafroth introduced NAWSA's recently proposed bill. Both bills were referred to the Woman Suffrage Committee. Representative Palmer submitted NAWSA's bill to the House.

The Union sent organizers throughout the United States during March to encourage suffrage demonstrations in May. Alice Paul and Dora Lewis travelled in the Northeast, Mabel Vernon in the Southwest, Emma Smith DeVoe in the West and Northwest, Minnie E. Brooke in the South, Jessie Hardy Stubbs in the Midwest, and Crystal Eastman Benedict in the Northwest and Midwest.

On May 2 suffrage parades and meetings were held in almost every state. At these demonstrations resolutions were passed favoring a federal suffrage amendment. On May 9 a national demonstration was held in Washington, D.C. State delegations marched from Lafayette Square to the east plaza of the Capitol where a choral presentation was given. The delegates with their resolutions were then received by a committee of senators and representatives who introduced the resolutions in Congress.

The Shafroth-Palmer bill was favorably reported to the Senate on May 3, as the Bristow-Mondell bill had been on April 7. On May 5 the Bristow-Mondell bill was reported out of the Judiciary Committee to the House. The Union sent delegations to the House Rules Committee asking that the suffrage bill be given time for a vote.

During the summer the Union organized fund raising campaigns in eastern resort areas. On July 1 Doris Stevens opened a headquarters at Newport, Rhode Island, and after a suffrage tour through Maryland, Mary Brennan established headquarters at Atlantic City.

A delegation of five hundred club women led by Anna K. Wiley called on President Wilson on June 30 asking his support for the suffrage amendment. On July 13 a delegation of over two hundred women led by Alice Paul, Lucy Burns, and Matilda Gardner asked the House Rules Committee to allow a vote on the suffrage bill.

The Union launched a successful campaign to increase membership and subscriptions to The Suffragist. In July there were 1794 subscribers; in August there were 2700. The Suffragist underwent various changes. Rheta Childe Dorr resigned as editor in May and the position of business manager was abolished; Alice Paul and Lucy Burns assumed these duties.

On August 29 and 30 a conference of the newly created National Advisory Council was held in Newport, Rhode Island. The Council decided to have the Union work in the congressional election campaigns in the suffrage states and oppose the Democratic party which had blocked the suffrage amendment. Two organizers were to work in each state from mid-September until election day.

On September 14 the Union organizers left Washington for the suffrage states. Lucy Burns and Rose Winslow went to California, Doris Stevens and Ruth Astor Noyes to Colorado, Jessie Hardy Stubbs and Virginia Arnold to Oregon, Margaret Whittemore and Anna McCue to Washington, Jane Pincus and Josephine Casey to Arizona, Edna S. Latimer and Lola C. Trax to Kansas, Elsie Lancaster to Utah, Gertrude Hunter to Wyoming, and Helena Hill Weed to Idaho. Mabel Vernon remained in Nevada where she had worked in the suffrage campaign since April. The Union's campaign was a success in that the federal suffrage amendment became a major political issue.

The Union held a tea on November 8 at which Christabel Pankhurst spoke. The Executive Committee met after the tea and decided to maintain headquarters in the suffrage states. Virginia Arnold remained in Oregon, and Ruth Astor Noyes stayed in Colorado. The remainder of the organizers were welcomed back to Washington on November 18 by a mass meeting at which Emmeline Pethick Lawrence spoke.

1915

During January 1915 the Congressional Union sponsored a number of activities. On January 6 Mrs. George A. Armes led a delegation of Democratic women to ask President Wilson's support of the suffrage amendment. The Executive Committee and the National Advisory Council of the Congressional Union met on January 10 at Washington; a general meeting of the Union was held the same day. The Union joined Delaware's campaign to obtain woman suffrage from the state legislature. It sent Mabel Vernon, Anna McCue, and Edna Latimer to Delaware as organizers. In January the Union also sent Margaret Whittemore to open a booth at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco. Throughout 1915 much of the Union's activity centered on the Exposition.

The National Advisory Council met on March 31 in New York to plan the year's work. The Council decided to form Congressional Union branches in each state. Each branch was to have a state chairman with additional chairmen over each congressional district. The branches were to be financially independent. The Council also adopted a constitution for the Congressional Union. At the meeting Alice Paul wished to resign as chairman in order to raise money, but no one else was willing to take the position.

Throughout 1915 conventions were held in the states to organize Union branches. The conventions elected officers, adopted constitutions, and planned state work which included sending delegations to United States congressmen. The conventions include the following:

Maryland - May 5 and 6	Maine - September 2
Washington, D.C. - May 12	Oregon - September 7 and 8
Delaware - May 13 and 14	Arizona - September
California - June 1 and 2	Michigan - October 1 and 2
Connecticut - June 8 and 9	Ohio - November 10 and 11
Virginia - June 10	South Carolina - November 17 and 18
Minnesota - June 28 and 29	Vermont - November 20 and 21
Colorado - August 16 and 17	Pennsylvania - November 23
Utah - August 19 and 20	New York - November 26
Idaho - August 24	New Jersey - November 30 and December 1

The Congressional Union sent organizers into the states to plan the conventions and establish branches. These organizers included Mabel Vernon who went to Delaware, Ohio, Colorado, Utah, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho; Emily Perry to Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and North Carolina; Ella C. Thompson to Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas; Doris Stevens to New York and California; Anna D. Martin to New York; Margaret Whittemore to California, Michigan, Ohio, and Rhode Island; Virginia Arnold to Oregon, Idaho; Montana, Washington, and North Dakota; Edna Latimer to Maryland and Delaware; Elsie Hill to Virginia and South Carolina; and Isabella Mott to Rhode Island and Ohio.

On September 14, 15 and 16 the Congressional Union organized a Women Voters Convention at San Francisco, consisting of delegates from the suffrage states. The convention pledged the support of voting women for the Susan B. Anthony amendment (the name given the federal suffrage amendment). Speakers at the convention were Alva E. Belmont, Mrs. Fremont Older, Dr. Yami Kin, Mme. Ali Kuli Khan, and Maria Montessori. The convention elected envoys, Sara Bard Field and Frances Joliffe, to carry resolutions and a petition to Congress and the president, endorsing federal suffrage.

The envoys left San Francisco on September 25 travelling east by automobile. Frances Joliffe was forced to leave the trip early but rejoined it in the East. Sara Bard Field with Ingeborg Kinstedt and Maria Kindberg completed the trip across the country stopping at such places as Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, New York, and Philadelphia. Mabel Vernon travelled ahead of the envoys planning demonstrations and meetings. At each stop signatures were added to the petition including those of governors, mayors, and congressmen.

On December 6 the envoys arrived in Washington, D.C., where they were received at the Capitol by a deputation from Congress. Later, the envoys and three hundred Congressional Union representatives were received by President Wilson.

The Union began its 1915 convention with the arrival of the envoys. The convention was held at the Cameron House, which was leased for the convention then retained as headquarters. On December 12 a mass meeting was held at the Belasco Theatre at which Alva Belmont, George Sutherland, and Gail Laughlin spoke. At the meeting a pledge of forty-five thousand dollars was raised for the work of the Union. The convention closed on December 13 with a Susan B. Anthony pageant produced by Hazel MacKaye.

Congress took little action on the suffrage amendment during 1915. On January 12 the House defeated the amendment by a vote of 174 to 204. On December 6 Frank Mondell introduced the Susan B. Anthony amendment in the House; George Sutherland introduced it in the Senate on December 7. The bills were referred to committee, and on December 16 the Union had a hearing on the amendment before the House Judiciary Committee. The speakers included Alice Paul, Mable Vernon, Florence Bayard Hilles, and Sara Bard Field.

1916

The drive for passage of the Susan B. Anthony amendment continued in 1916. On January 8 the Senate Woman Suffrage Committee quickly reported out the bill and placed it on the Senate calendar; however, action in the House bogged down. On February 9 a subcommittee sent the bill without recommendation to the full Judiciary Committee. On February 15 the Judiciary Committee voted nine to seven to table the bill for later consideration---probably in December. The Congressional Union lobbied against this action, and on March 14 the committee voted to reconsider the suffrage bill. The committee met on March 28 and with a vote of ten to nine again postponed consideration of the bill.

Throughout 1916 the Union continued organizing branches in various states. Conventions were held in Massachusetts, Texas, Arkansas, Kansas, Illinois, New Mexico, Wyoming, Montana, and Washington. The Union's growing membership was greatly augmented in January when the Women's Political Union of New York, under the leadership of Harriot Stanton Blatch, affiliated with the Union.

A conference of the National Advisory Council and state officers of the non-voting states met on April 8 and 9 in Washington, D.C. Speakers at the conference included Alice Paul, Lucy Burns, Anne Martin, Maude Younger, Elizabeth Kent, and Cora Smith King. The conference decided to appeal to the women of the enfranchised states for their support of the suffrage amendment.

On April 9 the Union sent a group of women on a railroad tour of the western enfranchised states. The Suffrage Special, as it was called, consisted of Lillian Ascough, Abby Scott Baker, Harriot Stanton Blatch, Lucy Burns, Agnes Campbell, Anna Constable, Sarah T. Colvin, Edith Goode, Jane Goode, Florence Bayard Hilles, Julia Hurlburt, Caroline Katzenstein, Dorothy Mead, Winifred Mallon, Agnes Morey, Katherine Morey, Gertrude B. Newell, Mrs. Percy Read, Ella Riegel, Elizabeth Rogers, Mrs. Townsend Scott, Helen Todd, and Marjory Whittemore. These women spent the next few weeks speaking, distributing literature, and selling The Suffragist. The Suffrage Special aroused interest in the federal suffrage amendment among voting women.

The climax of the Special's tour was a conference in Salt Lake City on May 11 and 12. This conference of Union members from the suffrage states passed resolutions and selected delegates to present them to Congress. The Suffrage Special and the western delegates arrived in Washington, D.C., on May 16. After a colorful welcome the delegates and their resolutions were received at the Capitol by a group of senators and representatives.

On June 5, 6, and 7 the Congressional Union organized a Woman's Party Convention of its members at Chicago's Blackstone Theatre. Delegates from the suffrage states were allowed to vote at the convention; delegates from the other states were allowed to speak but not vote. The convention, under the chairmanship of Maud Younger, adopted a platform supporting a federal suffrage amendment. The National Woman's Party elected Anne H. Martin as chairman, Phoebe Hearst and Mary A. Bartelme as vice-chairmen, and Mable Vernon as secretary.

The members of the National Woman's Party (NWP) were the enfranchised members of the Congressional Union. In the enfranchised states the Congressional Union branches simply changed their names to National Woman's Party. The officers of the NWP were for the most part figureheads with the NWP being in fact directed by the officers of the Congressional Union. This relationship between the two organizations continued into 1917 when it became expedient to rejoin the voting and non-voting women in a single organization.

The year 1916 was a presidential election year. The Republican candidate, Governor Charles Hughes, publicly supported a federal suffrage amendment. Woodrow Wilson and the Democratic Party favored suffrage by state action.

On August 10, 11 and 12 the National Woman's Party met at Colorado Springs to decide what action the organization would take during the election campaign. The NWP decided to endorse no candidates, but to oppose all Democratic candidates on the basis of that party's record on the suffrage amendment.

The NWP and the Union immediately sent organizers into the enfranchised states. For the next three months these organizers lobbied and spoke for federal suffrage and against the Democratic Party. The organizers included Lucy Burns, Maud Younger, Edith Barriger, and Lillian Ascough in Montana; Nina Allender, Margaretta Schuyler, and Rose Winslow in Wyoming; Agnes Campbell, Margaret Whittemore, and Julia Hurlburt in Washington; Effa Muhse, Jane Pincus, and Eleanor Barker in Idaho; Doris Stevens, Emily Perry, Beulah Amidon, and Hazel Hunkins in California; Effa Muhse, Florence Bayard Hilles, Elsie Hill, Ella Riegel, Harriot Stanton Blatch, and Jessie H. MacKaye in Colorado; Jane Pincus, Emily Perry, and Lucy Branham in Utah; Kathleen Taylor in Kansas and Missouri; Mary G. Fendall in Oregon; Vivian Pierce, Ella Thompson, Iris Calderhead, Rose Winslow, and Helen Todd in Arizona; Edna Latimer, Cornelia Wyse, Sarah Grant, and Anne H. Martin in Nevada; and Jessie H. MacKaye and Abby Scott Baker in Illinois.

In October Harriot Stanton Blatch and Inez Milholland Boissevain began speaking tours through the suffrage states. Inez Milholland attracted a great deal of public attention, but collapsed while speaking in Los Angeles. She died a short time later and was viewed by many as a martyr for suffrage.

The election resulted in victory for Wilson, but the NWP had achieved results. Besides influencing the outcome of some congressional contests, the NWP had gained the fear and respect of the Democratic Party. The Democrats had no desire to confront the suffragists in future election campaigns.

The NWP and the Union again turned their attention to President Wilson. While Wilson was speaking before Congress on December 5, Mabel Vernon, Elizabeth Rogers, Florence Bayard Hilles, Caroline Spencer, and Mrs. Harry Lowenburg unfurled a banner before him which read, "Mr. President, What Will You Do For Woman Suffrage?"

The NWP and the Union ended 1916 with a memorial service for Inez Milholland. A colorful and dramatic pageant was held in Statuary Hall at the Capitol.

1917

In 1917 the National Woman's Party and the Congressional Union began a new strategy to publicize the federal suffrage amendment. On January 9 a deputation called on President Wilson to present him with resolutions passed at a memorial service for Inez Milholland. The deputation requested federal action on suffrage. Wilson favored suffrage but would not use his influence to gain congressional action. The following day, January 10, twelve women left Cameron House and marched to the White House where they began to picket. They carried both lettered banners and purple, white, and gold banners. The picket continued for the next two months with special days set aside for states or various professional groups of women.

A convention was held in Washington, D.C., on March 1-4, 1917 at which the Congressional Union and the Woman's Party were merged into the National Woman's Party. Alice Paul was elected chairman, Anne H. Martin vice-chairman, Mabel Vernon secretary, and Gertrude Crocker treasurer. The convention also decided that the sole work of the NWP as an organization was to obtain federal suffrage, and this was to pertain whether or not the country was at war. On the final day of the convention a picket of one thousand women marched around the White House. They tried to see the president but were refused .

On April 2, the United States entered World War I and the NWP resumed its picket at the Capitol and White House. The NWP continued to picket peacefully for the next few months.

On June 20 Lucy Burns and Dora Lewis picketed with the "Russian" banner. This banner accused Wilson of deceiving Russia with his claim that the United States was a democracy, when in fact so many American women were unenfranchised. The banner was torn to pieces by the watching crowd. The next day a mob again destroyed the picket's banners. On June 22 the mob destroyed the banners, and Lucy Burns and Katherine Morey were arrested. They were never brought to trial.

The picket and the arrests continued. On June 27 Virginia Arnold, Lavinia Dock, Maud Jamison, Katherine Morey, Annie Arniel, and Mabel Vernon were sentenced to three days in the District Jail for obstructing traffic. Sixteen picketers were arrested on July 14. They were sentenced to sixty days at Occoquan Workhouse; however, President Wilson pardoned them on July 19.

On August 14 the picketers carried out the "Kaiser Wilson" banner. This banner accused Wilson of being an autocrat by ruling over women who had no voice in the government. The watching crowd became a riot. The picketers and the NWP headquarters were attacked and shots were fired, while the police stood idly by. The picket and arrests continued through August, September, and October.

Alice Paul was arrested for picketing on October 20 and was sentenced with five others to seven months in jail. The prisoners were placed in the District Jail where they began a hunger strike. Alice Paul was subjected to force feeding and transferred to a psychiatric ward for observation.

To protest the treatment of Alice Paul and the other suffrage prisoners a large picket was organized. On November 12 thirty-one picketers, including Lucy Burns and Dora Lewis, were arrested and sentenced the following day to Occoquan Workhouse. This group requested treatment as political prisoners and when denied this started a hunger strike and refused to cooperate with the jail authorities. On November 27 Alice Paul, Lucy Burns, and twenty others were released from jail.

During their imprisonment the suffragists were subjected to physical and mental abuse. They were denied their mail and often the right to see their counsel. They were given worm-riddled, tainted, and poorly prepared food and were exposed to unsanitary and diseased conditions. At various times the prisoners were refused even medical treatment. The treatment of the suffragists during their imprisonment is detailed both through correspondence and affidavits.

In order to relate their cause to the country, the NWP sent out speakers. Maud Younger was sent to the South, Anne H. Martin to the West and Northwest, Dora Lewis and Mabel Vernon to the Midwest, Abby Scott Baker to the Southwest, and Doris Stevens to the Northeast. The speakers by describing the treatment of the suffrage prisoners often converted hostile audiences to the picketers' cause. On other occasions they were denied the right to even speak in cities.

During 1917 congressional action continued on the federal suffrage amendment. On April 2 the Susan B. Anthony amendment was introduced in the House by John Raker and others; on April 4 it was introduced in the Senate. The Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage held a hearing on April 26 where the speakers included Dudley Field Malone, Mary Beard, and Jeannette Rankin. Hearings were again held before House and Senate committees on May 15. The House Rules Committee on June 6 voted six to five to form a Woman Suffrage Committee. On September 15 the suffrage bill was reported out of the Senate committee, and on September 24 the House created a suffrage committee by a vote of 181 to 107.

The NWP closed 1917 with a conference of its officers and National Advisory Council on December 6-9 at Washington, D.C. The conference ended with a mass meeting where picketers who had served jail terms were presented with prison pins.

During December the NWP was forced to give up its headquarters at Cameron House. The new headquarters was a mansion at 14 Jackson Place.

1918

On January 5 the National Woman's Party had a hearing before the House Woman Suffrage Committee. On January 9 President Wilson publicly declared himself in favor of the federal suffrage amendment. A major reason for Wilson's declaration of support was undoubtedly an attempt to end the adverse publicity for himself and the Democratic Party which resulted from the arrests and imprisonment of the suffragists. The Susan B. Anthony amendment was passed by the House on January 10 by a vote of 274 to 136.

The Woman's Party now turned its attention to Senate passage of the amendment. Speakers such as Lucy Burns, Abby Scott Baker, Doris Stevens, Beulah Amidon, Lillian Ascough, Mary Winsor, and Sarah T. Colvin toured the country to gain support for the amendment's passage. Dudley Field Malone, who had resigned as customs collector of New York City because of Wilson's inaction on suffrage, spoke at several large meetings. He called for Senate passage of the amendment.

Organizers were once again sent into various states to pressure senators to vote for the amendment. The organizers included Julia Emory in Maine and Pennsylvania; Rebecca Hourwich in Massachusetts; Iris Calderhead in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Colorado; Lucy Branham in Tennessee and Georgia; Gladys Greiner in Michigan, Virginia, and Maryland; Clara Rowe in Florida, Delaware, Tennessee, and Ohio; Alice Henkle in Colorado, Utah, and Missouri; Margaret Whittemore in California, Washington, Illinois, and Idaho; Joy Young in Michigan; Catherine Flanagan in Connecticut; Ella C. Thompson in Texas; and Kate Heffelfinger in Virginia.

In February Abby Scott Baker secured from the Republican National Committee a resolution supporting passage of the Susan B. Anthony amendment. The Executive Committee of the Democratic National Committee also endorsed the amendment. With this support an intensive lobbying campaign was launched by the NWP to gain the necessary Senate votes.

On May 6 Andrieus Jones called up the suffrage bill on the Senate calendar. The vote was to be taken on May 10, but opposition forces postponed it. On June 27 the vote on the bill was again delayed by a threatened filibuster.

The NWP held an open-air meeting at Lafayette Park on August 6 at which nearly one hundred women participated by carrying banners and speaking. The police broke up the meeting and arrested forty-eight women including Alice Paul and Lucy Burns. On August 12 many of these same women held two open-air meetings. Arrests were made at both meetings.

The arrested women were tried on August 15 and twenty-six, including Alice Paul and Lucy Burns, were sentenced to ten or fifteen days in the old District Workhouse. The women demanded treatment as political prisoners, and twenty-four began a hunger strike. The prisoners were released on August 20.

On September 16 another meeting was held at Lafayette Park where a speech of Wilson's was burned. No arrests were made.

Senator Jones again brought the suffrage amendment up for consideration on September 26. For the next few days the bill was debated by the Senate. On September 30 President Wilson addressed the Senate asking it to pass the amendment as a war measure. The amendment was defeated by the Senate on the following day; however, it was quickly put on the calendar for reconsideration.

The NWP began a new picket on October 7. Throughout the month picketers with banners stood before the Capitol or the Senate Office Building. Each time the picketers appeared they were arrested, detained, then later released.

In 1918 the National Woman's Party again entered the congressional election campaigns. The policy of the NWP was to oppose the election of all Democratic senators. Special emphasis was placed on the senatorial elections of New Hampshire and New Jersey. The NWP here supported suffrage candidates against anti-suffrage candidates, who were running for the unexpired terms of deceased senators. Both suffrage candidates were defeated. Special emphasis was also placed on Idaho where Senator Borah was running for reelection. Borah supported suffrage but refused to vote for the amendment on the basis of states rights.

A conference of the National Advisory Council, the National Executive Committee, and state officers of the NWP was held at Washington, D.C., on December 14, 15, and 16. The conference closed on December 16 with a meeting of three hundred women at Lafayette Park where Wilson's speeches were burned.

1919

In 1919 the National Woman's Party began a new form of demonstration---the watchfire. On January 1 Edith Ainge lit a fire in an urn placed before the White House. Dora Lewis then began to burn the speeches of President Wilson. A fire was also started in Lafayette Park by Hazel Hunkins. The police arrested four women.

The fire before the White House was kept burning continually for the next few days. On January 4 more of Wilson's speeches were burned and six women were arrested. The next day six more women were arrested including Alice Paul and Dora Lewis. These two women were sentenced to five days in the District of Columbia jail. The others in the group were given ten day sentences. The women immediately began a hunger strike.

On January 13 watchfires were lit before the White House and in Lafayette Park. Arrests were made, and twenty-two women were sentenced to five days in jail. The watchfires continued throughout January and early February.

A large watchfire demonstration was held on February 9 when a cartoon of President Wilson was burned. Forty women were arrested, and twenty-five were sentenced the next day to five days in jail. This group went on a hunger strike, but were released on February 13 because of illness.

In order to draw attention to President Wilson's and Congress' inaction on federal suffrage, a group of former NWP prisoners toured the country. The group became known as the Prison Special and included Lucy Burns, Mary Ingham, Abby Scott Baker, Sarah T. Colvin, Vida Milholland, Mary Winsor, Elizabeth Rogers, Amelia Walker, Mary Nolan, Gladys Greiner, Pauline Adams, Elizabeth McShane, Lillian Ascough, Lucy Ewing, Edith Ainge, Cora Week, Bertha Arnold, Mabel Vernon, Ella Riegel, Mrs. H.O. Havemeyer, Sue White, and Lucy Branham.

The NWP continued its struggle to have the Anthony amendment pass the Senate before Congress adjourned. The NWP lobbied both in Washington, D.C., and in various states to gain the votes needed for passage.

On February 3 Andrieus Jones said he would call the amendment up for a vote. The bill was defeated by one vote in the Senate on February 10. A slightly different form of the amendment was introduced in the Senate on February 17; however, it was never brought to a vote before Congress adjourned.

The new Congress convened on May 19. The Susan B. Anthony amendment passed the House on May 21 by a vote of 304 to 89. On June 4 the amendment passed in the Senate with a vote of 56 to 25.

The NWP immediately began work to secure ratification of the amendment in the legislatures of thirty-six states. The amendment was ratified by the following states:

- June 10 - Wisconsin and Michigan
- June 16 - Ohio, Kansas, and New York
- June 17 - Illinois
- June 23 - Pennsylvania
- June 25 - Massachusetts
- June 28 - Texas
- July 2 - Iowa
- July 3 - Arkansas, Missouri, and Montana
- August 2 - Nebraska
- September 8 - Minnesota
- September 10 - New Hampshire
- September 30 - Utah
- November 1 - California
- November 5 - Maine
- December 1 - North Dakota
- December 4 - South Dakota
- December 12 - Colorado

The NWP conducted two unsuccessful ratification campaigns in July. Despite the work of Mabel Vernon, Anne Martin, and Dora Lewis in Georgia and Sue White and Betty Gram in Alabama both of these legislatures voted against ratification.

By the end of 1919 the NWP was in financial straits. With past debts and future expenses facing them, the NWP in November launched a fund raising campaign called the Woman's Liberty Drive. The fund drive was not very successful, but the NWP continued the ratification campaign into the next year.

1920

In 1920 the ratification campaign continued. Mabel Vernon and Dora Lewis went to Kentucky to organize the work there. On January 6 Kentucky ratified. Other states which ratified that month were:

January 6 - Rhode Island
January 12 - Oregon
January 16 - Indiana
January 27 - Wyoming

Mississippi and South Carolina defeated ratification in January.

In January Betty Gram and Catherine Flanagan went to New Jersey to organize the ratification campaign under the direction of Alison T. Hopkins, the NWP state chairman. New Jersey ratified on February 10. Nevada ratified on February 7, and Arizona ratified on February 13. Lillian Kerr organized the campaigns in New Mexico which ratified on February 19 and Oklahoma which ratified on February 27. Maryland and Virginia defeated ratification in February.

Betty Gram and Mary Dubrow were sent as organizers to West Virginia which ratified on March 10. From there they went to Delaware where they were joined by Florence Bayard Hilles, Mabel Vernon, Dora Lewis, Elsie Hill, Anita Pollitzer, Vivian Pierce, Catherine Flanagan, and Alice Paul. Despite concerted lobbying by the NWP and political pressure from Democratic and Republican leaders, Delaware refused to ratify the suffrage amendment. On March 23 Washington became the thirty-fifth state to ratify.

In order to obtain the necessary thirty-sixth state, Vivian Pierce and Anne C. Neely began a ratification campaign in Louisiana in May. However, the state defeated ratification on June 15.

On June 8 the Republican national convention opened in Chicago. The NWP sent a delegation to the convention seeking Republican help in securing the thirty-sixth state. Although the NWP picketed the convention, the Republicans declined to take affirmative action on the matter. On June 22 a deputation of twenty-five NWP members met Senator Warren G. Harding, the Republican presidential candidate, at his Washington office. Harding refused to make any definite promises about ratification. During June Abby Scott Baker attended the Democratic national convention in San Francisco where she obtained that party's support for ratification.

On July 16 a NWP delegation called on Ohio's Governor James Cox, the Democratic presidential candidate, seeking his support for ratification. A delegation of 200 women met Senator Harding at his Marion home on July 22.

In July the NWP began its ratification campaign in Tennessee. Headquarters were opened at Nashville, Chattanooga, and Johnson City. The campaign was directed by Sue White, the state chairman, and organizers included Anita Pollitzer, Betty Gram, Anne C. Neely, and Catherine Flanagan. In August Florence Bayard Hilles, Mary Winsor, Mabel Reber, and Edith Davis joined the campaign. The Tennessee campaign consisted of extensive lobbying within the state, as well as pressure on the state legislature and governor by Harding and Cox, who were kept informed of the situation by Abby Scott Baker. The campaign was threatened by anti-suffrage forces and political struggles. Both the Republicans and Democrats wanted credit for delivering the thirty-sixth state, and both parties were willing to block ratification to prevent the other from gaining the credit. On August 18, after a rigorous campaign, Tennessee ratified. On August 26 the United States secretary of state signed the proclamation announcing ratification of the nineteenth amendment.

On September 14 Connecticut ratified after a campaign by Betty Gram, Catherine Flanagan, and Anita Pollitzer. On September 10 the National Executive Committee met at Alva Belmont's Long Island home to set the date for the final NWP convention and to discuss the Party's future.

In November and December the NWP worked with Congress to pass an enforcement act to complement the suffrage amendment. An extensive fund raising campaign was also begun to pay the $10,000 debt left from the ratification campaign.

1921

January and February 1921 were spent in preparation for the NWP convention to close the suffrage campaign and decide the fate of the Party. The convention was held February 15-18, 1921 at Washington, D.C. On February 15 the NWP presented the United States Capitol with a sculpture by Adelaide Johnson, portraying Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and Lucretia Mott. Jane Addams presided at the ceremony and Sara Bard Field and Joseph Gillett, speaker of the House of Representatives, were the speakers.

The rest of the convention was spent in debate concerned with continuing or disbanding the NWP. It was decided to continue the National Woman's Party and undertake a new campaign for equal rights for women.

SERIES II ADMINISTRATIVE FILES, 1913-1921

The Administrative Files, 1913-1921, are organized into five sections as listed and described below. Material within each section is arranged chronologically by year, month, and day. Partially dated material is placed at the end of the month or year; undated material is placed after the dated material.

- A. Annual Reports, 1913-1915
- B. Departmental Reports, 1913-1921
- C. Constitutions, 1913-1918
- D. Legislative Reports, 1913-1920
- E. The Suffragist Material, 1913-1921

A. ANNUAL REPORTS, 1913-1915

The Annual Reports include a May 1913 report by Lucy Burns, a June and July 1913 report, drafts of the annual report for 1913; drafts of the annual report for 1914, and a printed copy of the 1914 report. The 1913 reports were submitted by the Congressional Committee to the National American Woman Suffrage Association; the 1914 report was submitted by the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage to its members. The reports provide a detailed account of the Congressional Union's activities during 1913 and 1914.

B. DEPARTMENTAL REPORTS, 1913-1921

The Departmental Reports, 1913-1921, consist of twenty-five files containing reports and minutes for various Congressional Union and NWP departments and committees. The files, listed and described below, are arranged alphabetically.

The reports date primarily from 1917 and 1918; 1917 was the first year many departments were required to submit reports. The reports are principally monthly, but some departments did prepare annual reports.

Departments and committees within the NWP were created and abolished as needs and available staff changed. Some departments existed for only a brief time, so that only one or two reports are contained in the file.

1. Demonstration Department, June 1917 - November 1917; n.d.

This department existed during the height of the picket campaign. The monthly reports submitted by Virginia Arnold provide information concerning who was arrested, what banner they carried, when and where they were arrested, what they were charged with, as well as trial information listing bail, witnesses, and jail sentences.

2. Executive Secretary, March 1, 1917 - October 1917

These monthly reports by Virginia Arnold digest the activities of all NWP departments including the National Advisory Council, Legislative, Membership, National Headquarters, Organization, The Suffragist, Supply, and Treasury department

3. Finance Committee, January 24, 1917

This report lists money pledged to and collected by the NWP.

4. Headquarters Organizer, December 1, 1917 - March 31, 1918

The monthly reports of Julia Emory record meetings of the NWP in the Washington, D.C., area. The reports provide date and place of meeting, speakers, members secured, and resolutions passed.

5. Headquarters Secretary, n.d.

This report concerns clerical work performed at national headquarters.

6. Hospitality Department, December 1, 1917 - June 1918

Grace Needham, Natalie Gray, and Jessica Granville-Smith submitted these reports which detail events at headquarters. The reports list guests at headquarters, rents collected at headquarters, and NWP members who supplied hospitality to visitors.

7. Legislative Department, March 1917 - May 31, 1918

This department was organized by Anne Martin and later directed by Abby Scott Baker and Doris Stevens. Its primary concern was directing the lobby campaign with Congress, both in Washington and through the NWP state branches. The reports include information about the lobby campaign, congressional hearings, departmental correspondence, and the status and outlook of the federal amendment.

8. Literature Department, April 4, 1917 - August 1920

The monthly reports of Mary G. Fendall, Mildred Glines, Hazel Hunkins, and Elizabeth Kalb record requests for literature which are arranged by state or NWP organizer's name. The file also includes an inventory of literature available through the NWP with copies of some of the literature.

9. Membership Department, December 4, 1915 - July 1919

The reports of this department document the NWP's growth during the suffrage campaign. These monthly reports were prepared by Emily P. Stearns, Mildred Gilbert, Virginia Arnold, and Iris Calderhead. The membership information is arranged by state and includes such things as number of new members, number of resignations, gain or loss from previous month, and total membership.

10. National Advisory Council, December 27, [1916?] - February 7, 1921; n.d.

The National Advisory Council was created in 1914. It was comprised of influential women from throughout the United States who could support the NWP but who could not work actively. The Advisory Council had no direct voice in governing the NWP but was often consulted by the National Executive Committee before major decisions were reached.

The monthly reports of the chairman, Elizabeth S. Rogers, record the women asked to join the Council; who accepted; who refused; who resigned; and the activities of the Council members such as picketing, jail sentences, or speaking. A February 1921 report gives a history of the National Advisory Council during the suffrage campaign. The file also contains a list of members of the Advisory Council.

11. National Executive Committee, Minutes, January 5, 1917 - January 14, 1921; n.d.

This file is perhaps the most important of the departmental reports. The National Executive Committee was the governing body of the Congressional Union and the NWP. The Executive Committee, which was an outgrowth of the 1913 Congressional Committee of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, grew in size and influence during the suffrage campaign. Although important NWP actions and policy were to be decided at national conventions, in fact, the Executive Committee either guided or made many major decisions at their monthly meetings.

The minutes, prepared by National Secretary Mabel Vernon, provide insight into the strategy and activities of the NWP. The minutes detail the activities of the NWP in Washington and in the states. The work of the NWP organizers is described in the minutes.

12. National Headquarters Department, January 1916 - February 1918

These monthly reports by Ella M. Dean provide financial statements of the receipts from rent and expenditures for maintenance of the national headquarters.

13. National Headquarters Maintenance Committee, March 1917 - May 31, 1918

The maintenance committee was organized and directed by Elizabeth T. Kent. Her monthly reports list money received toward the headquarter's rent, money expended for the rent, and who contributed the money.

14. Organization Department, April 1917 - May 31, 1918

The Organization Department served as liaison between the NWP organizers and other departments at national headquarters. It supplied the organizers with literature, The Suffragist, and money; it planned their itineraries and scheduled meetings. The department directed the organizers' reports to the proper departments such as Membership, The Suffragist, or the national chairman.

The reports in this file were prepared by Grace Needham, Hazel Hunkins, Elizabeth Stuyvesant, Virginia Arnold, Jessica Granville-Smith, Alice Paul, and Mabel Vernon. Information within some reports is arranged by state and tells what congressional districts, counties, towns, and precincts have been organized. Information within other reports is arranged under the NWP organizer's name and tells where the organizer was working, what meetings she held, and how many members and subscribers she secured.

15. Petition Department, December 1917

This report by Natalie H. Gray concerns correspondence sent out by national headquarters and petitions received by them in support of the federal suffrage amendment.

16. Political Department, March 1917-1919

The Political Department, created in 1917, cooperated with the work of the Legislative Department. Its purpose was to send speakers to meetings and conventions around the country to solicit support for the federal amendment. The department also arranged interviews with prominent political leaders to gain their assistance in obtaining federal suffrage.

The department was directed at various times by Mary G. Fendall, Katherine Morey, Doris Stevens, and Abby Scott Baker. Their reports relate what organizations were contacted, what interviews held, and what correspondence sent out by the NWP. The reports list the individuals interviewed and their responses to appeals for support of the Susan B. Anthony amendment.

17. Press Department, August 1, 1917 - December 1920; n.d.

The Press Department was organized in 1914 by Jessie Hardy Stubbs and played a significant role in the NWP's strategy throughout the suffrage campaign. The reports in this file were prepared by Beulah Amidon, Florence Boeckel, and Alice G. Hidden.

The reports for each month provide various types of information such as the number of reporters contacted; number of news stories sent out; number of information bulletins sent out; the number of newspapers reached; the number of NWP officers receiving bulletins; the types of stories sent out; and the syndicates, news services, and magazines that were supplied with stories.

18. The Suffragist Report, October 15, 1913 - August 1917

These reports, primarily by Vivian Pierce, are financial statements giving the receipts from subscriptions and advertising and the expenditures for salaries, supplies, photographs, and printing.

19. The Suffragist: Advertising Department, March 1, 1917 - June 1918

The monthly reports by Hazel Hunkins, Rebecca Hourwich, and Betty Gram provide the name of the advertiser, the size and cost of the advertisement, and the number of times it ran in the paper.

20. The Suffragist: Circulation Department, May 1916 - September 1920

This is one of the largest and most complete departmental files. It includes reports by Elizabeth Smith, May I. Condon, Theresa Olzendam, Elizabeth Kalb, Alice O'Malley, and Ruth Quick. The information in the reports is arranged by state and gives the number of new subscriptions, renewals, and transfers to another state. The reports list the number of subscriptions secured and who obtained them.

21. The Suffragist: Editorial Department, May 1917 - January 31, 1918

These reports of Pauline Clarke detail the contributors of articles, number of The Suffragist issues in a month, number of cuts and cartoons used, and what publications were exchanged with the paper.

22. The Suffragist: Mailing Department, March 1, 1917 - May 31, 1918

A small number of reports by Dorothy Bready list the number of The Suffragists mailed or sold by direct solicitation.

23. The Suffragist: Office Manager, March 1, 1917 - December 1917

These reports by Bliss Finley, Elizabeth Smith, and Agnes Carter are similar to those of the Mailing Department. The reports record the number of The Suffragist addressed, mailed, and sold.

24. Supply Department, March 1, 1917 - January 31, 1918

The Supply Department was directed by Bessie H. Papandre. Her monthly reports include inventories of flags, penants, banners, poles, regalia, badges, pins, buttons, hats, robes, and office supplies. The reports give accounts of what was sold and purchased by the department.

25. Treasurer, [January 1914?] - September 1920

The reports of Joy Webster and Mary G. Fendall list receipts from collections, donations, and membership fees and expenditures by national headquarters and the state branches. The information, which is arranged by department, includes receipts from the sale of The Suffragist, literature, and other supplies.

C. CONSTITUTIONS, 1913-1918

The Constitutions, 1913-1918, consist of typescript and printed copies and drafts of Congressional Union and NWP constitutions. These include Congressional Union national constitutions; constitutions of branches of the Congressional Union in Minnesota, Maryland, Colorado, Utah, Arizona, Nevada, New York, North Dakota, Illinois, Indiana, New York City, and the District of Columbia; and a suggested constitution for branches of the NWP. The section also contains proposed constitutions of the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

D. LEGISLATIVE REPORTS, 1913-1920

A key aspect of the NWP's suffrage campaign was its lobby of the Congress. The NWP collected information concerning the personal and political life of each senator and representative, particularly in regards to his position on federal woman suffrage. This section contains this information gathered for the lobbying campaign.

The Legislative Reports, 1913-1920, consist of reports of interviews with congressmen; reports of deputations to congressmen; and copies and extracts of congressmen's correspondence about woman suffrage. There are lists of congressmen lobbied providing their position on the federal amendment and lists of congressional candidates who favor or oppose the federal amendment. The reports include polls taken before committee or floor votes on the Susan B. Anthony amendment, as well as records of the congressmen's votes.

A large portion of the Legislative Reports consists of mimeographed questionnaires, dating from 1914, 1915 and 1919, which contain personal and political information about senators and representatives. The personal information concerns the congressman's nationality, education, marital status, club memberships, wife's position on suffrage, religion, community standing, profession, and children. The political information concerns his party status, measures he voted for and against, his attitude on labor legislation, who his district supporters are, his relationships with newspapers, businesses or industries he represents, his state legislature service and voting record, and his position on woman suffrage.

In addition, there is information collected during the ratification campaign including reports of interviews, extracts of correspondence, and statements by state governors and legislators. There are voting polls of legislators and reports of the ratification vote of various state legislatures.

E. THE SUFFRAGIST MATERIAL, 1913-1921

The Suffragist was the major publication of the Congressional Union and the NWP during the suffrage campaign. The first issue appeared in November 1913 as a weekly publication. In February 1920 it became a monthly issue which continued until February 1921.

The Suffragist Material, 1913-1921, consists of articles submitted to The Suffragist; the material may or may not have been published. The manuscript, typescript, and mimeographed documents include editorial comments on suffrage, the federal amendment, or the NWP's activities. Reports and transcripts from congressional hearings, NWP meetings and conventions, speeches, and deputations are included. Biographical sketches of NWP members and others such as Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott, and Elizabeth Cady Stanton are found in this section. The material also consists of copies of articles from newspapers and magazines. In addition, there are drafts of "Notes of the Week," a review of NWP activities and reports on the progress of the federal suffrage amendment.

The articles in this section were written principally by NWP members such as Lucy Burns, Florence Boeckel, Vivian Pierce, Helena Hill Weed, Elizabeth T. Kent, Florence Kelley, Mary R. Beard, Beulah Amidon, and Elizabeth S. Rogers.

Included in The Suffragist material are poems and songs submitted to the Party. Copies of plays such as "We Demand" by Mrs. J.J. White and the Susan B. Anthony pageant by Hazel MacKaye were placed in this section. Additional material consists of drafts for the pamphlet, The Susan B. Anthony Amendment, by Ida Husted Harper and a promotional piece for Jailed for Freedom.

The researcher should note that The Suffragist was not filmed with this collection, but a complete file of it was filmed on reels 151-153 of The National Woman's Party Papers, 1913-1974. Thomas C. Pardo, ed. (Sanford, N.C.: Microfilming Corporation of America, 1979).

SERIES III PRINTED MATTER, 1889-1936

The Printed Matter, 1889-1936, is organized into four sections, as listed and described below. Material within each section is arranged chronologically by year, month, and day. Partially dated material is placed at the end of the month or year; undated material is placed after the dated material.

- A. National Woman's Party Publications, 1913-1921
- B. Publications of Other Organizations, 1901-1935
- C. Newspaper Clippings, 1889-1936
- D. Cartoons, 1913-1925

A. NATIONAL WOMAN'S PARTY PUBLICATIONS, 1913-1921

The Congressional Union and the National Woman's Party did not publish a great deal of material during the suffrage campaign. The major publication was The Suffragist. The NWP in many instances used the publications of other organizations such as the National American Woman Suffrage Association. The NWP published only a few pamphlets, and the bulk of the NWP printed material consists of leaflets published during the 1916 presidential election campaign. Instead of using printed materials the NWP relied heavily on press releases and news stories to inform the public of its policies and activities. The National Woman's Party Publications are organized in three parts---Press Releases, Pamphlets, and Leaflets and Broad sides. Each part is described below.

1. Press Releases, 1913-1921

This part contains mimeographed, typescript, and printed press releases of the Congressional Union and the NWP. The press releases are primarily from the national headquarters, but there are a small number of releases from NWP state branches. There is a limited number of press releases from the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

The press releases in some instances are editorial comments; however, they primarily are accounts of NWP activities such as the 1914 and 1916 election campaigns against the Democrats; the Suffrage Special; the formation of the NWP; the picket campaign; the arrests, trials, and jail terms of the suffragists; the Prison Special; the watchfires; congressional activity on the federal suffrage amendment; and the ratification campaign. Also included in this part are miscellaneous lists of newspapers and reporters.

2. Pamphlets, 1914-1920

The Pamphlets, 1914-1920, consist of twelve documents. There are programs for the March 3, 1913 suffrage inaugural parade and for a theatre performance given by the Congressional Union in May 1913.

Speeches published as pamphlets by the Congressional Union include one by Emmeline Pankhurst dated November 23, 1913, and one by E.J. Hill, dated June 8, 1915 and entitled Government by Consent of the Governed. In 1919 the NWP published as pamphlets two reprints---The Militant Wing and the Federal Suffrage Amendment by Harold J. Laski and The Militant Campaign by Doris Stevens. Another 1919 pamphlet possibly prepared by Doris Stevens is Jailed for Freedom: Some Phases in the Front Line of a War for Democracy Not Quite Won.

Two pamphlets by Ida Husted Harper were published in 1915 by the Congressional Union. These are A National Amendment for Woman Suffrage and The Susan B. Anthony Amendment. The remaining pamphlets include a report of the Congressional Union's hearing before the House Judiciary Committee on December 16, 1915; a program for class study in government and citizenship; and two editions of the itinerary of the 1916 Suffrage Special.

3. Leaflets and Broad­sides, 1913-1921

The Leaflets and Broad­sides, 1913-1921, include pledge forms, leaflets, handbills, broadsides, reprints, programs, convention calls, itineraries, newsletters, and songsheets. The material is printed by the national headquarters and the state branches.

The handbills and broadsides announce a variety of Congressional Union and NWP meetings and special events. The newsletters are primarily bulletins of the Nevada branch of the NWP dating from 1916. The itineraries detail the schedules of the Suffrage Special and the Prison Special.

Many of the leaflets were produced during the 1914, 1916, and 1918 congressional and presidential election campaigns. They state NWP policy and urge people to vote against the Democratic Party. Other leaflets concern such things as ratification of the federal amendment and its relationship to states rights or the voting power of blacks. There are several drafts of a leaflet by Mary R. Beard and Florence Kelley entitled Amending State Constitutions: A Study of Constitutions Which Lack Suffrage Amendments (June 1916).

B. PUBLICATIONS OF OTHER ORGANIZATIONS, 1901-1935

This section is arranged in three parts as described below.

1. Government Documents, 1904-1935

The Government Documents, 1904-1935, almost exclusively concern the passage and ratification of the federal woman suffrage amendment and include material from the United States Congress, various state governments, and federal courts. The congressional documents consist of House and Senate resolutions; House and Senate suffrage bills; calendars; rosters; excerpts from the Congressional Record; suffrage speeches; voting records; lists of members; and reports and transcripts of the Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage, the House Judiciary Committee, and the House Committee on Woman Suffrage. The state documents consist of abstracts of votes, ballots, memorials, proclamations, resolutions, legislative journals, rosters, and governors' messages. The court records include briefs and transcripts of record from the District of Columbia Appeals Court concerning suits filed by the NWP picketers against the District of Columbia and its jail superintendents, as well as a suit contesting the ratification of the suffrage amendment in several states. There is a brief amici curiae filed in the United States Supreme Court for a suit contesting Ohio's ratification of the suffrage amendment. The government documents also include a copy of the proclamation issued by the United States secretary of state announcing the ratification of the nineteenth amendment. A journal from the League of Nations concerning women's rights is included in this part.

2. Pamphlets, 1902-1920

The Pamphlets, 1902-1920, consist of programs, minutes, pamphlets, reports, newsletters, and periodicals. The programs include those from the 1913, 1915, and 1917 conventions of the NAWSA. The reports include documents such as the 1909, 1910, and 1912 annual reports of the National Women's Social and Political Union.

There are pamphlets by F.W. Pethick Lawrence, Emmeline Pethick Lawrence, Carrie Chapman Catt, and Ida Husted Harper. The pamphlets are generally propaganda for or against woman suffrage, but there are also biographical sketches of Clara Barton, Susan B. Anthony, and Josephine Butler. Pamphlets published by political parties concern their platforms and candidates.

The periodicals include copies of The Crisis, Everywoman, Life and Labor, The Woman Citizen, and The Woman Patriot. The newsletters are generally organs of various groups such as Progress of NAWSA, Britannia of the National Women's Social and Political Union, the Maryland Suffrage News of the Just Government League of Maryland, and The Woman's Protest of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage. A copy of Out West gives a detailed account of the 1914 suffrage campaign in Nevada.

3. Leaflets and Broadsides, 1901-1922

The Leaflets and Broadsides, 1901-1922, consist of postcards, reprints, leaflets, handbills, programs, promotional pieces, newsletters, broadsides, and songsheets. A large number of the leaflets are anti-suffrage propaganda. There are also leaflets and broadsides from the Democratic, Republican, Socialist, and Farm-Labor parties, as well as material from Anne Martin's campaign for United States senator. The newsletters include bulletins of the Nevada Equal Franchise Society, the Nevada Women's Civic League, the Delaware Suffrage Campaign, and Anne Martin's senatorial campaign.

C. NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS, 1889-1936

The Newspaper Clippings, 1889-1936, are organized in two parts---Miscellaneous Newspaper Clippings and Newspaper Clipping Scrapbooks. These are described below.

1. Miscellaneous Newspaper Clippings, 1889-1936

These clippings are from a variety of newspapers and magazines and consist of editorials and letters to the editor for and against woman suffrage; cartoons; articles about Susan B. Anthony, Clara Barton, and Lillian Russell; and articles detailing NWP activities such as the 1913 inaugural suffrage parade, the 1916 presidential election campaign, the pickets, the formation of state branches, speaking tours, the Prison Special, and the Susan B. Anthony amendment's progress in Congress.

2. Newspaper Clipping Scrapbooks, 1914-1919

The thirteen clipping scrapbooks consist of three scrapbooks of clippings from various newspapers and ten scrapbooks containing clippings from specific newspapers including the New York Tribune, The Evening Call, The Evening World, the New York American, The Evening Mail, The Sun, The Globe, The New York Herald, The New York Times, the Morning Telegraph, and the Evening Telegram. The clippings concern Congressional Union and NWP activities such as delegations to President Wilson, the anti-Democrat policy, picketing, the Suffrage Special, and the Susan B. Anthony amendment.

D. CARTOONS, 1913-1925

The Cartoons, 1913-1925, consist of 206 sketches. These cartoons generally appeared in The Suffragist and in many instances were the cover design. The cartoons are primarily those of Nina E. Allender; other artists include J. Donahey, A. Ducardie, Frederick Van Loon, Cesare, Lute Pease, Boardman Robinson, Marguerite B. Neale, Marietta M. Andrews, F.W. Freeman, Robert Carter, and Robert H. Wiese.

The cartoons are arranged chronologically by year, month, and day with partially dated material placed at the end of the month or year. Undated cartoons are placed after all dated material and are arranged alphabetically by artist's name. Each cartoon was assigned a frame number, 1-206, which appears on the microfilm and refers to the cartoon in this guide. Annotations for each cartoon including frame number, title, captions, and artists' name are found in the complete reel list.

SERIES IV PHOTOGRAPHS, 1913-1921

- A. Individual Portraits
- B. Action Photographs, 1913-1921

The photograph series contains two sections---Individual Portraits and Action Photographs. The photographs pertain to individuals and events of the suffrage campaign of the Congressional Union and the National Woman's Party.

The portraits are arranged alphabetically by individual's name and are assigned frame numbers 1-160, which appear on the microfilm and refer to the photographs' captions which are provided in the complete reel list. The portraits include NWP officers, NWP staff, members of the National Advisory Council, and officers of NWP state branches. The portraits also include other prominent suffragists such as Carrie Chapman Catt, Jane Addams, Sophonisba Breckinridge, Ida Husted Harper, and Harriet Taylor Upton.

The 1170 action photographs are mounted and arranged chronologically. Captions appear on the microfilm with the photographs. The action photographs depict a variety of activities during the suffrage campaign including suffrage parades, deputations to the president and Congress, the Suffrage and Prison Specials, NWP meetings and conventions, the political campaigns of 1914, 1916, and 1918, the pickets, the arrest and imprisonment of the suffragists, meetings at Lafayette's statue, the watchfires, and ratification of the federal woman suffrage amendment.

NOTE ON THE USE OF THE INDEX OF IMPORTANT CORRESPONDENCE

The Index of Important Correspondence provides access to the significant correspondence of important NWP personalities and well-known historical figures. The indexed correspondence details the historical development of the NWP and its state branches; the organizational structure of the NWP; NWP activities, strategy, and policy; the NWP's relationships with other organizations; and the passage and ratification of the federal suffrage amendment.

Approximately twenty percent of the correspondence in the collection has been indexed, as selected by the editor. The indexed correspondence is listed in most cases under the name of the individual corresponding with the officers and staff at national headquarters.

All letters of United States presidents, including Woodrow Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt, Warren G. Harding, and Herbert Hoover, were indexed. Correspondence of United States senators and representatives was indexed if it concerned the congressman's position on woman suffrage or the federal suffrage amendment.

Since the majority of the correspondence in this collection pertains to Alice Paul, the editor has decided not to include an Alice Paul entry in the index. Alice Paul's correspondence will instead be entered under the name of the other correspondent. Entries in the index are arranged chronologically and provide the following information:

- (1) date the letter was written
- (2) use of "to" or "fr" to indicate the direction of the letter
- (3) name of sender or recipient - abbreviations were used for NWP officers and staff members whose names appear frequently
- (4) abbreviation indicating whether the letter was written by a secretary (secy)
- (5) abbreviations indicating whether the letter contains enclosure(s) (encl, encls)
- (6) abbreviations indicating a report (rpt), affidavit (a), form correspondence (fc), or copy (c)
- (7) "See" and "See Also" cross references were provided indicating that correspondence relating to an individual or organization may be found under another or additional listings
